Each section contains one long text. The texts are authentic and are taken from books, magazines, magazines and newspapers. They are written for non-urgencizers and are on academic topics of general interest. The texts are appropriate and accessible to persons who accept tests entering undergraduate or postgraduate courses or seeking professional registration. The texts range from descriptive and factual to discursive and analytical. Texts may contain nonverbal materials, such as diagrams, graphs or illustrations. If the texts contain technical terms, a simple glossary shall be provided. A variety of questions selected from the following types are used: selection with selection, identifying information, identifying writer's views/claims, matching information, matching headings, matching characteristics, matching end of sentence, completing the sentence, completing the summary, completing notes, completing a table, filling in the chart, filling in the chart label, short answer questions. Marking Each exact response gets 1 mark. The results of 40 are converted to the 9-band IELTS. The results shall be reported in whole and semi-groups. The texts are authentic and are taken from books, magazines, newspapers and magazines. They are selected as non-urgencies, but are suitable for people who enter university courses or seek professional registration. Academic free reading questions Continence: 60 minutes The academic writing test of IELTS consists of two tasks. The topics in these tasks are related to areas of common interest and are suitable for those who accept test theories, who enter bachelor's and postgraduate qualifications or seek professional registration. Answers to both tasks must be written in a formal style. Task 1 You will be presented with a chart, table, chart, or chart, and you will be asked to describe, summarize, or explain the information in your own words. You may be asked to describe and present data, describe the stages of a process, how something works, or describe an object, plan, or design. Task 2 You will be asked to write an essay in response to a point of view, argument, or problem. You will support your point of view with appropriate examples of your own knowledge and experience. Academic writing free sample questions Mist: 60 minutes The general writing training test includes two tasks that are based on topics of common interest. Task 1 You will be presented with a situation and asked to write a letter requesting information or explaining the situation. The letter may be personal, semi-formulaic or by style. Task 2 You will be asked to write an essay in the argument or problem. The essay can be a little more personal in style compared to an academic writing task. You will support your point of view with appropriate examples of your own knowledge and experience. General training Writing free sample questions The general learning reading test requires you to read excerpts from books, magazines, newspapers, notices, advertisements, company manuals and guidelines. These are materials with which it is possible to meet daily in an English-speaking environment. There are three parts in the test, part 1 contains two to three short texts, Part 2 contains two texts and Part 3 contains one longer text. Total learning reading free sample duration of the question: 30 minutes The listening test is the same for IELTS academic test and IELTS general training test. You'll need to answer 40 questions in response to four entries. You will listen to four recordings, which are a mix of monologues and conversations from a number of native speakers, and you will hear each recording only once. There are 10 questions for each part of the listening test. These questions test your ability to understand: Basic ideas and detailed factual information The opinions and attitudes of speakers The purpose of speeches The ability to follow the development of ideas. Listening details: Record 1 Conversation between two people set in the daily social context. Record 2 Monologue set in a social context of everyday life, such as a speech about local facilities. Record 3 conversations between up to four people set in an educational or educational context, such as a university lecturer and a student discussing a task. Record 4 Monologue of an academic subject, for example, a university lecture. Listening to free sample questions Duration: 11 to 14 minutes Language test will evaluate the use of spoken English. The test will last between 11 and 14 minutes, where you will discuss various topics with an IELTS reviewer. Your test will take place in a quiet room with an examiner who will encourage you to continue talking. Unlike the AI test, the IELTS examiner will be able to make you feel calm and confident. They are also able to understand their accent to ensure you get the best possible result. There are three parts of the talking test. Part 1 The examiner will ask you general questions about yourself and a number of familiar topics, such as home, family, work, training, and interests. This part lasts between 4 and 5 minutes. Part 2 You will be given a task card and the reviewer will ask you to talk about a topic. You'll have one minute to prepare before you talk for two minutes. The reviewer will then ask one or two questions on the same topic to complete this part of the test. Part 3 You will be asked additional questions related to the topic in Part 2. These questions will allow you to discuss more abstract ideas and questions. This part of the test lasts between 4 and 5 minutes. Talking free questions for example
